

Canva Transparency Report

Current as at: 30 June 2022.

Canva, like most technology companies, occasionally receives requests from law enforcement agencies seeking User Data that we process on behalf of our users. Canva responds to these requests for User Data in accordance with our Authority Request Access Policy.

Canva strongly believes its users should be in control of where their personal data goes. Canva will only disclose user data in response to valid legal process, unless we think sharing such information could prevent serious harm. Canva will not voluntarily give its user's data to governments for surveillance purposes. We strongly believe in the importance of trust, and so we will be as transparent as laws will allow in relation to requests we receive for user data.

This transparency report provides information relating to law enforcement requests for User Data that Canva processed from 1 January 2022 to 30 June 2022.
